WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

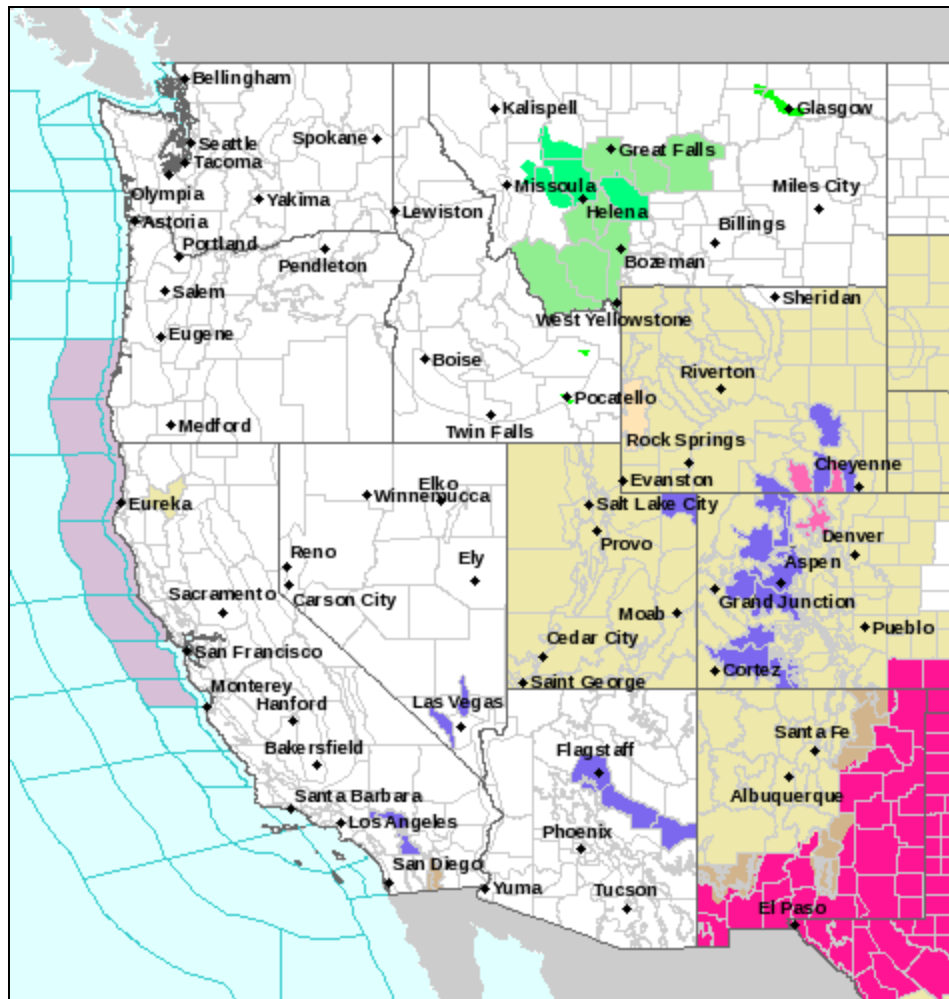

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

A drying trend will take place as high pressure prevails the rest of this week, with warmest inland areas in the mid and upper 80s. There is a small chance of isolated mountain showers in the north this weekend, as a weak weather system moves through the region bringing slightly cooler temperatures. Warmest areas in the lower 90s are possible early next week behind the weekend weather system.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Temperatures will continue to be well below normal through Wednesday, with upper 40s and 50s across the mountains and 60s to low 70s in the valleys. Significant warming and drying will take place Thursday through Saturday as a ridge of high pressure builds into California from the Pacific Ocean. Temperatures will be 10 to 15 degrees above normal and minimum humidity will be mainly in the teens Friday and Saturday. Winds will be light Thursday through Saturday. The ridge of high pressure will weaken as a trough moves inland into the Pacific Northwest bringing a slow cooling trend as well as a gradual increase in humidity Sunday through early next week.

The registered owner was a 23 year old male, who planned to ski Mt. Shasta with a female wilderness guide. Siskiyou County Sheriff's Office was notified and initiated a SAR deployment. Updated coordinates over the following 1 ½ hours indicated the device was moving downhill and stopped at a trailhead at the base of the mountain. At 1510 hrs, the R/O contacted IERCC, indicated the activation was accidental, and he was not in distress. Siskiyou Sheriff was notified and demobilized. Mission Closed.
